See instant results as you type

As you start to type your search, Google Instant predicts what you're looking for and starts to show results for your search. If you don't see the results you want, keep typing and the results will update.

Change your instant result settings

Note: If you want your Google Instant setting to be the same on every browser you use, make sure to sign in to your Google Account before updating your settings.

1. Visit the Search settings page on your computer or tablet.
2. Under "Google Instant predictions," choose when Google should show you results as you type.
3. Select Save.

Where instant results come from

The possible searches that you see are based on what other people are searching for and the content of web pages indexed by Google.

Instant results aren't appearing

If Google Instant is turned on but you aren't seeing instant results, try the suggestions below.
